Oracle Cloud Infrastructure 2025 Multicloud Architect Professional Sample Questions (Q56-Q61):

NEW QUESTION # 56

How does Oracle Database on Google Cloud make database management easier for customers?

- A. OCI offers a management console within Google Cloud to simplify database management.
- B. It automatically transfers all database management tasks to the Oracle Cloud Infrastructure console.
- C. It enables customers to manage databases through the Google Cloud console or Google Cloud automation tools.
- D. It requires customers to use Oracle-specific management tools.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Oracle Database@Google Cloud simplifies management by allowing customers to use the Google Cloud console and GCP automation tools (e.g., Terraform) to provision and manage databases, integrating seamlessly with GCP workflows. It doesn't shift tasks to OCI (Option B), nor does OCI embed a console in GCP (Option C). Option D contradicts the multicloud ease-of-use goal. This is a key feature highlighted in Oracle's June 2024 Google Cloud partnership announcement.

NEW QUESTION # 57

During provisioning in Oracle Database@Azure, delegated subnets are linked with OCI VCN inside the OCI pods in Azure. When do you perform this step during provisioning?

- A. Delegated subnets attachment with OCI pods containing the Exadata Database Service is a prerequisite action that is completed during the OCI account linking.
- B. Delegated subnets attachment happens when you provide the subnet details during provisioning of Oracle Exadata Database Service in Azure.
- C. Delegated subnets attachment happens when you provide the subnet details during provisioning of Oracle Exadata VM Cluster.
- D. Delegated subnets attachment happens when you provide the VCN details during the provisioning of container databases in OCI.

Answer: C

Explanation:

In Oracle Database@Azure, delegated subnets from an Azure VNet are linked to the OCI VCN within OCI pods during the provisioning of the Oracle Exadata VM Cluster. This step occurs in the Azure portal when you specify subnet details, enabling the Exadata infrastructure to communicate with Azure resources. Option A is incorrect as container databases are provisioned later in OCI, not Azure. Option B misplaces this as a prerequisite during account linking, and Option C is too vague, as it references the broader service rather than the specific VM Cluster step. Oracle's provisioning guide confirms this timing.

NEW QUESTION # 58

Which type of routing does Oracle FastConnect use to exchange routing information between on-premises networks and Oracle Cloud Infrastructure?

- A. OSPF
- B. RIP
- C. BGP
- D. Static Routing

Answer: C

Explanation:

Oracle FastConnect uses Border Gateway Protocol (BGP) to dynamically exchange routing information between on-premises networks and OCI, ensuring optimal path selection. OSPF (Option A) and RIP (Option C) are not used, and static routing (Option D) is an option but not the default or dynamic method. Oracle's FastConnect documentation confirms BGP as standard. The original question's placeholder has been replaced with BGP as the correct answer.

NEW QUESTION # 59

A company XYZ has been using Oracle Cloud Infrastructure to host their mission-critical applications, but they have decided to start using Azure for some of their workloads. They want to enable connectivity between their Oracle Cloud Infrastructure and Microsoft Azure to create a multicloud architecture.

- A. Use public Internet to connect the two clouds.

- B. None of the above.
- C. Use a VPN connection to connect the two clouds.
- D. Use OCI-Azure Interconnect to establish a private, high-bandwidth, low-latency connection between the two clouds.

Answer: D

Explanation:

The OCI-Azure Interconnect is the official Oracle-Microsoft partnership solution for establishing a private, high-bandwidth, and low-latency connection between OCI and Azure. This interconnect leverages Azure ExpressRoute and Oracle FastConnect to create a dedicated network link, bypassing the public internet for enhanced security and performance. A VPN connection (Option A) is possible but less optimal due to higher latency and lower reliability compared to the interconnect. Using the public internet (Option B) is insecure and unsuitable for mission-critical applications. This solution is detailed in Oracle's multicloud architecture guides and the OCI-Azure partnership documentation, emphasizing its suitability for enterprise multicloud deployments.

NEW QUESTION # 60

Which use case is least likely to require Oracle Interconnect for Google Cloud?

- A. Deploying a multicloud disaster recovery solution
- B. Migrating data from an on-premises data center to OCI
- C. Running latency-sensitive applications across OCI and GCP
- D. Leveraging OCI's Autonomous Database with GCP's AI tools

Answer: B

Explanation:

Oracle Interconnect for Google Cloud is designed for multicloud scenarios between OCI and GCP, such as integrating Autonomous Database with GCP AI (Option A), disaster recovery (Option C), or latency-sensitive apps (Option D). Migrating on-premises data to OCI (Option B) is a single-cloud use case that doesn't inherently require GCP connectivity, making it the least likely to need this interconnect. Oracle's multicloud use case documentation supports this distinction.
