NEW QUESTION # 164

When should you use the transaction command instead of the scats command?

- A. When you have over 1000 events in a transaction.
- B. When you need to group on multiple values.
- C. When you need to group based on start and end constraints.
- D. When duration is irrelevant in search results. .

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

The transaction command is used to group events into transactions based on some common characteristics, such as fields, time, or both. The transaction command can also specify start and end constraints for the transactions, such as a field value that indicates the beginning or the end of a transaction. The stats command is used to calculate summary statistics on the events, such as count, sum, average, etc. The stats command cannot group events based on start and end constraints, but only on fields or time buckets. Therefore, the transaction command should be used instead of the stats command when you need to group events based on start and end constraints.

NEW QUESTION # 165

What is the correct syntax to search for a tag associated with a value on a specific fields?

- A. Tag=<field>::<tagname>
- B. Tag<field>(tagname.)
- C. Tag-<field>?
- D. Tag::<field>=<tagname>

Answer: D

Explanation:

Reference:

A tag is a descriptive label that you can apply to one or more fields or field values in your events². You can use tags to simplify your searches by replacing long or complex field names or values with short and simple tags². To search for a tag associated with a value on a specific field, you can use the following syntax: tag::<field>=<tagname>². For example, tag::status=error will search for events where the status field has a tag named error. Therefore, option D is correct, while options A, B and C are incorrect because they do not follow the correct syntax for searching tags.

NEW QUESTION # 166

Which knowledge object is used to normalize field names to comply with the Splunk Common Information Model (CIM)?

- A. Event types
- B. Field alias
- C. Search workflow action
- D. Tags

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct answer is

A) Field alias¹²³.

In Splunk, a field alias is a knowledge object that you can use to assign an alternate name to a field³. This can be particularly useful when you want to normalize your data to comply with the Splunk Common Information Model (CIM)¹².

The CIM provides a methodology for normalizing values to a common field name¹. It acts as a search-time schema to define relationships in the event data while leaving the raw machine data intact². By using field aliases, you can map vendor fields to common fields that are the same for each data source in a given domain⁴. This allows you to correlate events from different source types by normalizing these different occurrences to a common structure and naming convention¹.
