Splunk Enterprise Certified Architect Sample Questions (Q159-Q164):

NEW QUESTION # 159

To reduce the captain's work load in a search head cluster, what setting will prevent scheduled searches from running on the captain?

- A. `adhoc_searchhead = true` (on the current captain)
- B. `adhoc_searchhead = true` (on all members)
- C. `captain_is_adhoc_searchhead = true` (on the current captain)

- D. captain_is_adhoc_searchhead = true (on all members)

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

To reduce the captain's work load in a search head cluster, the setting that will prevent scheduled searches from running on the captain is captain_is_adhoc_searchhead = true (on the current captain). This setting will designate the current captain as an ad hoc search head, which means that it will not run any scheduled searches, but only ad hoc searches initiated by users. This will reduce the captain's work load and improve the search head cluster performance. The adhoc_searchhead = true (on all members) setting will designate all search head cluster members as ad hoc search heads, which means that none of them will run any scheduled searches, which is not desirable. The adhoc_searchhead = true (on the current captain) setting will have no effect, as this setting is ignored by the captain. The captain_is_adhoc_searchhead = true (on all members) setting will have no effect, as this setting is only applied to the current captain. For more information, see Configure the captain as an ad hoc search head in the Splunk documentation.

NEW QUESTION # 161

What is the algorithm used to determine captaincy in a Splunk search head cluster?

- A. Raft distributed consensus.
- B. Round-robin distribution consensus.
- C. Rapt distributed consensus.
- D. Rift distributed consensus.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

The algorithm used to determine captaincy in a Splunk search head cluster is Raft distributed consensus. Raft is a consensus algorithm that is used to elect a leader among a group of nodes in a distributed system. In a Splunk search head cluster, Raft is used to elect a captain among the cluster members. The captain is the cluster member that is responsible for coordinating the search activities, replicating the configurations and apps, and pushing the knowledge bundles to the search peers. The captain is dynamically elected based on various criteria, such as CPU load, network latency, and search load. The captain can change over time, depending on the availability and performance of the cluster members. Rapt, Rift, and Round-robin are not valid algorithms for determining captaincy in a Splunk search head cluster.
