Nutanix NCS-Core certification exam is a globally recognized credential that demonstrates an individual's expertise in Nutanix core infrastructure technologies. Nutanix Certified Services Core Infrastructure Professional certification exam is designed to test the individual's knowledge and skills in Nutanix cluster architecture, configuration, and management. Nutanix is a leading provider of cloud computing software and services, and the NCS-Core Certification is an excellent opportunity for IT professionals to demonstrate their expertise in Nutanix technologies and advance their careers. Nutanix Certified Services Core Infrastructure Professional certification exam is a rigorous test of an individual's knowledge and skills and is highly valued by employers around the world.

Nutanix Certified Services Core Infrastructure Professional Sample Questions (Q203-Q208):

NEW QUESTION # 203

A customer has a primary datacenter with 12 Nutanix blocks distributed across three racks. The customer wants to achieve the most resiliency possible. They also have a datacenter in a branch office that is 400 kilometers away from the primary datacenter. Which two solutions should be used? (Choose two.)

- A. Time Stream to a remote site
- B. Rack awareness
- C. Block awareness
- D. Async DR to a remote site

Answer: B,D

NEW QUESTION # 204

An administrator needs to make sure an RF2 cluster can survive a complete rack failure without negatively effecting workload performance. The current cluster configuration consists of the following:

- * 30 nodes: distributed 10 nodes per rack across three 42U rack
- * Each nodes is configured with 40TB usable storage all flash (Cluster Total 1.2 PB Usable)
- * Current cluster utilization is 900TB storage

Which configuration changes should be made to make sure that the cluster meets the requirements?

- A. Expanse the cluster by adding 8 nodes to a new 42U rack
- B. Expanse the cluster by adding 9 nodes to a new 42U rack
- C. Expanse the cluster by adding 3 additional nodes per rack, 9 nodes total.
- D. Expanse the cluster by adding 2 additional nodes per rack, 6 nodes total.

Answer: C

Explanation:

In Nutanix, a cluster with RF2 (Redundancy Factor 2) can tolerate the failure of a single node or drive1.

However, to ensure that the cluster can survive a complete rack failure without negatively affecting workload performance, we need to consider rack awareness. When rack fault tolerance is enabled, the cluster has rack awareness and the guest VMs can continue to run with failure of one rack (RF2) or two racks (RF3). The redundant copies of guest VM data and metadata exist on other racks when one rack fails2.

Given the current cluster configuration (30 nodes distributed 10 nodes per rack across three 42U racks), adding 3 additional nodes per rack (9 nodes total) would increase the redundancy of the cluster and improve its ability to withstand a complete rack failure.

This is because the additional nodes would provide more storage capacity and compute resources, allowing the cluster to continue running workloads even if one rack fails.

NEW QUESTION # 205

How should a consultant verify that a Nutanix cluster can tolerate a single-node failure?

- A. [root@cvm~]# ncli cluster get-domain-fault-tolerance-status type=node
- B. nutanix@cvm~$ ncli cluster status type=node
- C. nutanix@cvm~$ ncli cluster get-domain-fault-tolerance-status type=node
- D. [root@avh~]# ncli cluster fault-tolerance-status type=node

Answer: C

Explanation:

To verify that a Nutanix cluster can tolerate a single-node failure, the consultant should use the command `nutanix@cvm~$ ncli cluster get-domain-fault-tolerance-status type=node`. This command is executed from the Controller Virtual Machine (CVM) and checks the cluster's fault tolerance status specifically for node failures, providing insights into how the cluster's data resiliency and redundancy configurations are holding up against potential single-node failures. NEW QUESTION # 206

In which part of the Knowledge Transfer can the customer learn how to create, escalate, comment, and close cases?

- A. Demonstration of features
- B. Handover Slides and Checklist
- C. Operations Guide
- D. Demonstration of the Support Portal

Answer: D

Explanation:

The best way for the customer to learn how to create, escalate, comment, and close cases is through a demonstration of the Support Portal. This portion of the Knowledge Transfer focuses on showing customers how to effectively use the Support Portal, which is an essential tool for managing support tickets and communicating with Nutanix support. This hands-on demonstration helps ensure that customers are familiar with the functionalities and can navigate the portal effectively. References:
