Spark-Tech

Out here, you live and die by gasoline and steel. But the cities run on a different kind of juice. Spark-Tech is what the road crews call the gear that "falls off the back of a truck" from Torque-Dyne's military contracting wing - the "Civic Solutions Division." It's alien technology to you - no pistons, no grease, just silent, weird power. It's powerful, but it's unreliable, and it feels like a betrayal of everything you stand for. But sometimes, it's the only thing that'll save your skin.

Using Spark-Tech

When you find a piece of Spark-Tech, the Chronieler will tell you what it does.

Spark-Tech has a limited number of uses, or Charges. When you pick up an item, roll a d4 to see how many Charges it has left. Once the Charges are gone, the device is just a useless brick.

To activate a piece of Spark-Tech, you must pass a GEARS Test (DR 12). You don't really understand this stuff, and getting it to work is a gamble.

Success: The device works as intended. You expend one Charge.

Failure: It goes wrong. Roll on the Misfire Table below. You still expend one charge.

1	Power Drain. The device sputters and dies, using up all remaining charges. You take d4 damage as your nerves jolt.
2	Wrong Target. It works perfectly! On you. Or your bike. Or your closest ally.
3	Loud & Bright. The device works, but with a blinding flash and a deafening shriek that attracts every scavenger and patrol within a mile.
4	Overcharge. The device works, but it burns out in the process. It uses up all its remaining Charges in one go.
5	Feedback Loop. The device shorts out violently. Take d6 damage and you have Disadvantage on all Gears Tests until you can get a good night's sleep.
6	Explosive Failure. The device detonates in your hands. Take d8 damage and the tech is utterly destroyed.
