Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 110

An organization wants to dynamically adjust its application to serve different user needs. What are the benefits of storing their data in the cloud for this use case?

- A. Real-time data ingestion and analysis
- B. Automatic data cleaning and validation
- C. No data access management required
- D. Data can be stored in archive for long term access

Answer: A

Explanation:

By storing their application data in the cloud the organization will be able to gather and analyze user behavior data in real-time. This will enable them to dynamically adjust their application for different user needs.

NEW QUESTION # 111

A customer is migrating their on-premises data analytics solution to Google Cloud. The current solution has a lot of data being read from and written to disk. The performance of this approach has occasionally been a bottleneck for a scale of operations that your customer has. The application is fault tolerant and can withstand machine going down frequently. In moving to Google Cloud they are asking your advice on any way to improve performance?

- A. Use Persistent Disk with the VMs
- B. Use local SSDs with the VMs
- C. Use Big Query Which has very fast data access and analysis
- D. Use Cloud Storage which can be central, scalable storage

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation

Local SSDs are attached to the VM and have very high throughput. However, when the VM shuts down, The local SSD is also shut down, Since our Workload here is fault tolerant, than is not an issue.
