CFA Institute Certificate in ESG Investing Sample Questions (Q220-Q225):

NEW QUESTION # 220

Regrowing previously logged forests is most likely an example of climate:

- A. change mitigation
- B. resilience
- C. change adaptation

Answer: A

Explanation:

Regrowing previously logged forests is an example of climate change mitigation. Climate change mitigation involves actions that reduce the concentration of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere, thereby addressing the root causes of climate change.

* Carbon Sequestration: Regrowing forests increases the number of trees, which absorb carbon dioxide from the atmosphere through photosynthesis. This process helps to reduce the overall concentration of greenhouse gases.

* Restoration of Ecosystems: By regrowing previously logged forests, ecosystems are restored, enhancing their ability to function as carbon sinks. Healthy forests play a crucial role in maintaining the balance of carbon in the environment.

* Long-term Impact: The regrowth of forests has a long-term impact on mitigating climate change by continuously removing carbon dioxide from the atmosphere over extended periods, contributing to global efforts to limit temperature rise.

References:

NEW QUESTION # 221

All else equal, which of the following companies would most likely have a lower price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio than industry average?

- A. A company with lower employee turnover than industry average
- B. A company with higher climate-related risk than industry average
- C. A company with higher scores on independent surveys of employee satisfaction and engagement than industry average

Answer: B

Explanation:

All else being equal, a company with higher climate-related risk than the industry average would most likely have a lower price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio. This is because higher climate-related risks can affect a company's future profitability and stability, leading investors to apply a higher discount rate to its future earnings, thus lowering its valuation.

* Higher climate-related risk (B): Companies facing significant climate-related risks may encounter regulatory costs, physical damage to assets, and shifts in market demand, which can adversely impact their financial performance. Investors might anticipate these potential negative impacts and thus assign a lower P/E ratio to such companies.

* Lower employee turnover (A) and higher employee satisfaction (C): These factors generally indicate better management practices and a more engaged workforce, which are often viewed positively by investors and may lead to a higher P/E ratio, reflecting confidence in the company's stability and growth

* potential.

NEW QUESTION # 222

Which of the following most likely indicates strong corporate governance? A company board with:

- A. directors that have similar professional backgrounds.
- B. a chair who also serves as the company's CEO.
- C. gender diversity.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Gender diversity on a company's board is often seen as an indicator of strong corporate governance, as it promotes diverse perspectives and better decision-making. (ESGTextBook[PallasCatFin], Chapter 5, Page 236)

NEW QUESTION # 223

An investor requires a social return and will tolerate a sub-market financial return. This best characterizes:

- A. social investing.
- B. impact investing.
- C. sustainable and responsible investing.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Impact investing is characterized by the intention to generate a measurable, beneficial social or environmental impact alongside a financial return. Investors engaged in impact investing are often willing to accept sub-market financial returns to achieve their social or environmental goals. This differentiates impact investing from social investing, which may focus more on avoiding negative impacts, and sustainable and responsible investing, which seeks to balance financial returns with ESG factors.

NEW QUESTION # 224

Which of the following is most likely categorized as an external social factor?

- A. Human rights
- B. Product liability
- C. Working conditions

Answer: A

Explanation:

Definition of External Social Factors:

External social factors refer to social issues that affect or are affected by the company's interactions with the broader society and environment. These factors typically include human rights, community relations, and broader social impacts.

According to the CFA Institute, external social factors encompass elements that are outside the direct control of the company but are influenced by or impact its operations.

Human Rights:

Human rights issues involve the company's responsibility to respect and protect the rights of individuals and communities affected by its operations. This includes avoiding complicity in human rights abuses and ensuring fair treatment of all stakeholders.

The MSCI ESG Ratings Methodology emphasizes the importance of human rights as a critical external social factor, affecting a company's reputation and license to operate.

Comparison with Other Options:

Product Liability: This is typically considered a governance or internal risk factor, as it relates to the company's responsibility for the safety and reliability of its products.

Working Conditions: This is usually categorized as an internal social factor, as it pertains to the treatment of employees within the company.

Importance in ESG Integration:

Addressing human rights issues is crucial for managing risks and enhancing corporate sustainability. Companies that fail to respect human rights can face significant reputational damage, legal liabilities, and operational disruptions.

The CFA Institute notes that effective management of external social factors like human rights is essential for long-term value creation and risk mitigation.
