The Agile Manifesto is a document that defines the key values and principles behind the Agile philosophy and helps development teams work more efficiently and sustainably. Each of the four key values is split into two sections—a left-hand side and a right-hand side. In other words, though there is value in the items on the right, we value the items on the left more. What is one of the key values of the Agile Manifesto?

- A. Contract negotiation over customer collaboration
- B. Individuals and interactions over processes and tools
- C. Comprehensive documentation over working software
- D. Following a plan over responding to change

Answer: B

Explanation:

While the Agile Manifesto itself is not a network-specific construct, its values are relevant to business-driven network design approaches outlined in CCDE v3.1—especially when designing flexible and adaptive systems.

One of the core values of Agile is:

"Individuals and interactions over processes and tools"

This emphasizes that communication and collaboration among people are more crucial than relying solely on formal tools or rigid processes. For network architects and designers, this translates into focusing on team collaboration and business alignment during iterative design cycles.

Incorrect Options:

* A, B, and D are all reversed versions of Agile's actual values; they incorrectly prioritize the right-hand side.
