- A. The API keys are the same. The site settings need to be manually replicated.
- B. The API keys are the same. The site settings will be automatically replicated.
- C. The API keys are different. The site settings need to be manually replicated.
- D. The API keys are different. The site settings will be automatically replicated.

Answer: C

Explanation:

When pushing configuration changes from a staging environment to a production environment in SAP Customer Data Cloud:

* API Keys: Each environment (staging and production) has its own unique API keys. These keys are not shared between environments.

* Site Settings Replication: Site settings are not automatically replicated between environments. You must manually replicate the configuration changes (e.g., policies, screen-sets, etc.) from staging to production.

The other options are incorrect:

* A & B: API keys are always different between environments, and site settings are not automatically replicated.
