EXIN EPI Certified Information Technology Manager Sample Questions (Q40-Q45):

NEW OUESTION #40

Whilst creating the IT service catalog, a needs analysis is conducted. One of the items discussed is the data points required for the IT services. What is the objective of these data points?

- A. To identify the data being used by the customer
- B. To establish the operating hours of the IT services
- C. To measure the performance of IT services delivered
- D. To determine the life expectancy of IT services

Answer: C

Explanation:

InITIL's service catalog management, data points required for IT services are used tomeasure the performance of IT services delivered(A). These data points (e.g., uptime, response times, incident resolution rates) enable the IT provider to monitor and report on service quality, ensuring alignment with service level agreements (SLAs) and customer expectations. A needs analysis identifies key performance indicators (KPIs) to track service effectiveness.

- * Identify data used by the customer (B):Focuses on customer data usage, not service performance.
- * Determine life expectancy (C):Relates to service lifecycle planning, not data points.
- * Establish operating hours (D):Operating hours are a service attribute, not the primary purpose of data points.

Reference:EPI CITM study guide, under Service Management, likely references ITIL's service catalog management, emphasizing KPIs for performance measurement. Check sections on service catalog or performance metrics.

NEW QUESTION #41

From the list below, which activity is not considered to be an activity in the software development phase?

- A. Code writing
- B. Documenting
- C. Implementation
- D. Testing

Answer: C

Explanation:

In the Software Development Life Cycle (SDLC), the development phase typically includes code writing (A), testing (B), and documenting (C) to build and verify the software. Implementation (D) is part of the deployment phase, where the software is installed and made operational in the production environment, not part of development.

Reference: EPI CITM study guide, under Application Management, likely covers SDLC phases, distinguishing development from implementation. Refer to sections on software development or application lifecycle management.

NEW QUESTION #42

Little to no budget is available for hiring new staff for the IT service desk. What is the ideal method of sourcing knowing that little time is available?

- A. Recruitment agency
- B. Word of mouth
- C. Internal IT staff based on a SWOT analysis
- D. Internet job board

Answer: D

Explanation:

Given the constraints offittle to no budgetandlimited time, internet job boardsare the ideal sourcing method. They are cost-effective (often free or low-cost), allow quick posting of job openings, and reach a wide pool of candidates, enabling rapid hiring. Word of mouth (A) is informal and may not yield qualified candidates quickly. Internal IT staff based on SWOT analysis (B) is not a standard recruitment method and takes time to analyze. Recruitment agencies (D) are expensive and slower due to their processes, making them unsuitable for low-budget, urgent hiring.

Reference: EPI CITM study guide, under IT Organization, likely discusses recruitment strategies for IT staff, emphasizing cost-effective methods like job boards. Check sections on human resource management or staffing.

NEW QUESTION #43

To further reduce fraud cases in the transfer of land titles, the government introduces a new system which, in the back-end, makes use of blockchain technology. Key functionality of the system is speed of transmission and privacy. Which type of blockchain is most preferred for this type of application?

- A. Private blockchain
- B. Community blockchain
- C. Public blockchain

• D. Consortium blockchain

Answer: A

Explanation:

For a government system handling land title transfers, the key requirements are speed of transmission and privacy. Aprivate blockchain most suitable because it restricts access to authorized participants, ensuring privacy and confidentiality of sensitive data such as land ownership records. Private blockchains are controlled by a single organization or a limited group, allowing faster transaction processing compared to public blockchains, which require consensus from a large, decentralized network. This aligns with the need for quick and secure transactions in a controlled environment.

Public blockchains (B) are open to anyone, which compromises privacy for sensitive government data.

Community blockchain (A) is not a standard term in blockchain technology, and consortium blockchains (D), while involving multiple organizations, are less suitable for a single government entity needing full control.

Reference:EPI CITM study guide likely covers blockchain applications under IT Strategy, emphasizing private blockchains for secure, controlled environments like government systems. Refer to sections on emerging technologies or IT strategy frameworks for detailed blockchain categorizations.

NEW QUESTION #44

Senior management requests a service requirement analysis to justify the need for a vendor. During the analysis, it is concluded that the internal IT provider has insufficient manpower and lacks the skills to deliver the work required. Which gaps are identified?

- A. Technical and organizational
- B. Financial and organizational
- C. Financial and technical

Answer: A

Explanation:

The analysis identifies insufficient manpower (a staffing issue) and lack of skills (a capability issue) within the internal IT provider. These gaps correspond toorganizational (manpower, related to staffing and resource allocation) and technical (skills, related to expertise and technical capabilities) deficiencies (B).

- * Financial and organizational (A): Financial gaps (e.g., budget constraints) are not mentioned in the scenario.
- * Financial and technical (C): Financial issues are not indicated; the focus is on manpower and skills.

According tovendor management frameworks, identifying gaps in internal capabilities (e.g., staffing and technical expertise) justifies outsourcing to a vendor to fill these deficiencies.

Reference:EPI CITM study guide, under Vendor Selection/Management, likely covers service requirement analysis and gap identification. Check sections on vendor justification or capability assessment.
