SailPoint Certified IdentityNow Engineer Sample Questions (Q19-Q24):

NEW QUESTION # 19

Does the following use case accurately describe provisioning on a source that has provisioning disabled?

Solution: Provisioning is initiated by a process (e.g. Access Request Role Assignments). Provisioning instructions are calculated based on current access, and go through filtering and expansion processes. Provisioning is then assigned to a source for provisioning.

Since provisioning is disabled on the source a manual task is opened in IdentityNow A person carries out the provisioning manually.

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: A

Explanation:

In this use case, provisioning is initiated, but the source has provisioning disabled, meaning automated provisioning cannot proceed. The process described is accurate: when provisioning is assigned to a source where provisioning is disabled, IdentityNow does not execute the provisioning through its automated system. Instead, a manual task is generated for a human to complete the provisioning process. This manual intervention ensures that the necessary access changes can still occur, albeit through human oversight rather than an automated connector.

This scenario aligns with how IdentityNow handles sources that are flagged as non-provisionable.

The provisioning logic is still calculated within the system, but actual implementation requires manual steps when the source is configured in this way.

NEW QUESTION # 20

Is this an advantage of microservice architecture?

Solution: identities take up less space in the cloud.

- A. No
- B. Yes

Answer: A

Explanation:

No, microservice architecture does not inherently make identities take up less space in the cloud.

Microservices are primarily focused on improving scalability, resilience, and modularity by breaking down an application into smaller, independent services. While this architecture may optimize resource usage and improve performance, it does not specifically reduce the storage space required for identities or data. Data storage concerns are more related to optimization techniques like data deduplication or compression rather than the architecture style itself.

NEW QUESTION # 21

Can a user with Report-admin level permissions within IdentityNow perform this action?

Solution: View a live display of events in progress

- A. No
- B. Yes

Answer: A

Explanation:

No, a user with Report-admin level permissions cannot view a live display of events in progress. The Report-admin role is primarily concerned with reporting functions, such as viewing and managing reports. Viewing live events, especially operational or real-time system events, would require higher-level permissions, typically associated with System Admin or Operations Admin roles, which have access to system dashboards, monitoring tools, and event logs.

NEW QUESTION # 22

Is this statement true about the IdentityNow release cycle?

Solution: IdentityNow releases are controlled and coordinated by SailPoint.

- A. Yes
- B. No

Answer: A

Explanation:

Yes, IdentityNow releases are controlled and coordinated by SailPoint. SailPoint manages the software release cycle for IdentityNow, which follows a SaaS (Software-as-a-Service) delivery model.

This means updates, new features, patches, and other improvements are automatically rolled out by SailPoint without requiring manual intervention by customers. The release schedule is typically structured around planned maintenance windows and communicated to customers in advance.

SailPoint ensures these updates are deployed securely and efficiently to all tenants.

NEW QUESTION # 23

Exhibit.

The diagram represents the contents of a single Active Directory forest. Assume that all employees have employeeType set to employee and contractors have employeeType set to contractor.

is the following configuration valid for the given scenario?

Solution:

The customer needs to query only Employees from Domain A and Contingent Workers from Domain B. For tests:

1. DN - dc=domains, dc=com; TLS =No; Server = server.domaina.com

2. DN - dc=domaininb, dc=com; TLS =No; Server = server.domaina.com

search DNS:

1. DN - OU=users, DC=domains, DC=com; LDAP Filter = (employeeType=employee

2. DN - OU=Contingent Workers, OU=Users, DC=domainb, DC=com

- A. No
- B. Yes

Answer: A

Explanation:

The configuration provided is not valid due to an error in the server specification for Domain B. The server for Domain B (domainb.com) is incorrectly set to server.domaina.com, which is not correct.

Each domain in the Active Directory (AD) forest should have its own respective server. For Domain B, the correct server should be something like server.domainb.com, assuming that there are distinct domain controllers for each domain. Additionally, the search DN for Domain A appears to be valid as it correctly filters for employees with (employeeType=employee). The search DN for Domain B seems to be partially correct, as it targets the OU=Contingent Workers, but the issue lies with the incorrect server assignment.

Key Reference from SailPoint Documentation:

Active Directory Configuration: Each domain in a forest should be connected to its respective server, and incorrect server assignments between domains can cause LDAP search and synchronization issues. Proper domain controller assignment for both domaina.com and domainb.com is required.
